Higher gross revenue and lower DPU were in line with expectations

Bukit Batok Connection partially funded by 1-for-10 Preferential Offering

Lower gross revenue and DPU going forward, as Loyang Way security deposit is depleted

- Loyang Way deposit last to mid-May 2017
- Weaker than expected take-up rate (9%) → cut FY17e/FY18e DPU by 2.4%/2.3%

Manageable lease expiry of 12.6% by NLA for remainder of 2017

 Flat reversions on blended-basis, QoQ higher occupancy to 91.8% from 89.6%, QoQ lower WALE to 3.3 yrs from 3.4 yrs (short-term leases)

- Retail outlook brighten, expect to turnaround in near term on the back of higher demand and favourable employment condition
- Renewed optimism on a better prospect of Singapore economy will lift consumer sentiment; while growing household net worth encourage consumers to spend
- Indicators showed that: (i) Consumers are spending more on Food & Beverages and dining out more often; (ii) consumer preference shift back to Supermarkets; and (iii) potential recovery in luxury goods
- Earnings to drive share price; waiting for more evidence of economy growth trends and improved profits to catch up with the valuation

Growing optimism over economic outlook to fuel spending

'07: SG economy slowed down from its peak, retail sales started to decline

PhillipCapital

Your Partner In Finance

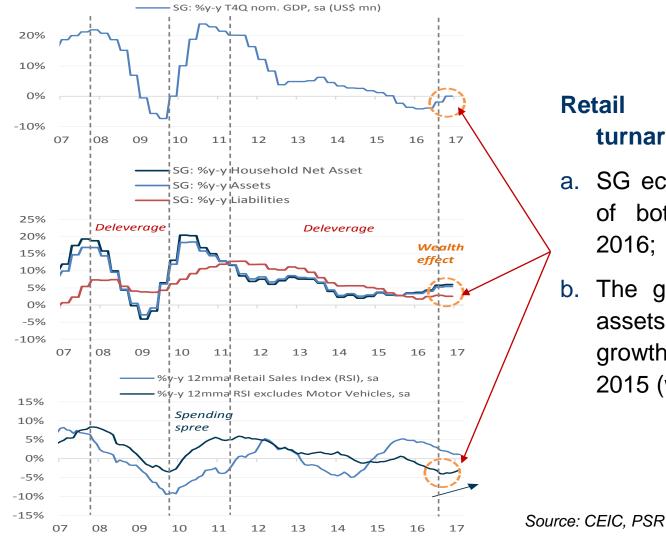

- '07 to '09: deleveraging; households borrowed less
- '09 to '14: low interest rates spur spending and borrowing; Retails sales rebounded by end-2009 after economy showed clearer sign of bottoming out
- '11: European debt crisis; retail sales started to slowdown following the sluggish economy growth

Growing optimism over economic outlook to fuel spending

Retail sales should turnaround in near term:

 a. SG economy showed sign of bottoming up in late 2016;

b. The growth of household assets outpaced the growth of loans in mid-2015 (wealth effect)

Resilient Services sector

2016 SG GDP

Services Producing Industries vs Goods Producing Industries = c.67% vs c.24%

The sector went into slight contraction of -0.8% for a year only in 2009

Source: CEIC, PSR

Growth in Services Producing Industries has slowed down but unlikely to fall into contraction:

Backed by resilient domestic demand

 Current situation is nowhere near 2007-08 GFC as global economy outlook brightens

- a. The IMF is looking to revise its forecasts for 2017 and 2018 global economy growth
- SG economic growth is expected benefit from the ripple effects of higher external demand, rebounding global commodity prices and domestic reforms within the region

Renewed optimism to lift consumer confidence

Singapore MasterCard Asia Pacific Consumer Confidence

Based on a scale of 0 to 100

- 0 : the most pessimistic
- 40 60 : neutral
- 100 : the most optimistic

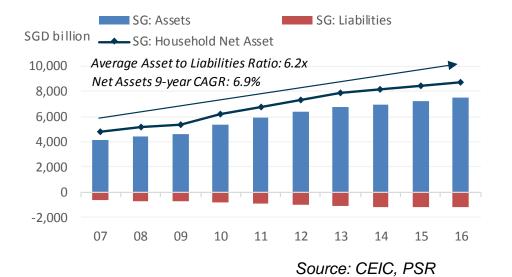

- The latest survey was at pessimistic level in 2H 2016; but likely to bottom out soon
- The stronger economic indicators signal brighter а translating prospect, economy improved to an consumer sentiment, which will fuel private expenditures

Feeling wealthy

PhillipCapital Your Partner In Finance

Growing household net worth induces household spending

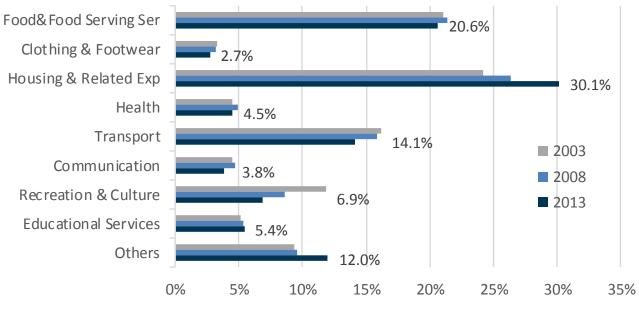

SG's nominal GDP grew at a CAGR of 5.7% between 2007 to 2016; the net assets of Singapore households grew at 6.9%

- Debts are backed by assets which are unlikely to experience a sharp decrease in their value
- Currency and deposits, Central Provident Fund and Residential Property account for 83% of 2016 household assets

What are Singaporeans spending on?

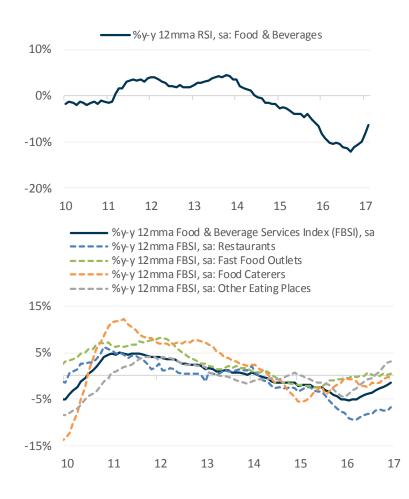

Distribution of Monthly Household Expenditure

Source: CEIC, PSR

Mostly on Housing, Food and Transport (c.65% of 2013 total household expenditure)

More on F&B and dining out more often

 Singaporeans are more willing to spend more on Food & Beverages – which could be in terms of volume and/or value (price point)

 F&B Services sub-index for Restaurants, which is most sensitive to economic climate, is gaining traction, underscoring that consumers are more upbeat of their future income.

Re-visiting supermarkets; Potential cyclical recovery

Purchasing power of consumers and costs

Employment and wages

- Unemployment rate to remain stable and low at c. 2%
- The tight labour market should underpin wage growth and thus supports our view on higher household spending in 2017

Rising costs at factory gate may translate to higher retailing price

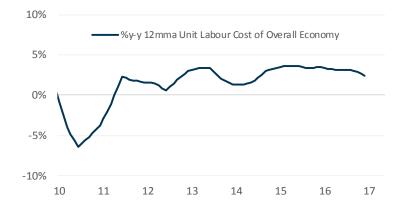

- Inflation remains muted in near term, but wholesale prices are at an upward trend
 - If the growth in wholesale prices accelerates, we may see higher retailing prices by end of the year

Lower OpEx to offset higher input costs

 However, retailers may need to absorb the additional costs and embrace margin compression due to fiercer competition

 Nonetheless, easing pressure from labour costs and lower rental expenses could help to reduce operating expenses

Sharp interest rate hikes could dampen sentiment

Recall PSR's house view:

The US Fed is behind the curve of raising interest rate, and interest rate hike to be steep instead the expected gradual rise

(a) FX risk

- Higher US interest rates may cause capital outflows, which could in turn weaken local currency. But central bank and government had prepared to contain pressures on exchange rates and consumer prices.
- MAS maintained its neutral policy stance of zero per cent appreciation of the S$NEER for an "extended period"

(b) Credit implications, burden to service debts

 Household leverage has increased in recent years, but we think the risk should be contained by favourable economic growth and employment conditions

Despite lingering uncertainties:

- Green shoots of recovery in Singapore economy: Improving Goods Producing Industries will lift GDP growth
- Brighter prospects on Singapore economy would lift consumer sentiment; while wealth effect from increasing household net worth would spur spending
- With higher wages and stable unemployment rate, consumers have higher purchasing power
- Positive signals: Consumers are spending more on Food and Beverages, dining out more often, supermarket and luxury spendings showed signs of recovery
