

Singapore REITs Monthly: Jan24

Hit by higher financing costs

SINGAPORE | REAL ESTATE (REIT) | UPDATE

- The S-REITs Index fell 4.4% in January after gaining 8.9% in December. The top performer for the month was Frasers Centrepoint Trust (FCT SP, ACCUMULATE, TP S$2.38). It gained 1.8% after commendable results and the proposed acquisition of a further 24.5% stake in NEX. The worst performer was Prime US REIT (PRIME SP, BUY, TP US$0.37) it fell 30.4% after gaining 95.1% the month earlier, due to portfolio valuation and gearing concerns. The retail sub-sector was the outperformer in January, gaining 0.3%, lifted by FCT. The worst performing sub-sector was overseas commercial. It fell 13.2% after gaining 39.7% in December, dragged down by Singapore-listed US office REITs.
- S-REITs are now trading at their 10-year average forward dividend yield of c.6.1%. P/NAV of 0.9x is 1.4x s.d. below the mean of 1.03x. From the 23 REITs which announced dividends thus far, 74% saw a contraction in DPU. Highest growth in DPU were from hospitality REITs.
- We remain OVERWEIGHT on S-REITs as we enter a monetary easing cycle. We continue to favour REITs with a healthy balance sheet, strong sponsors, and improving operating metrics such as REITs in the hospitality and retail sub-sector. Catalysts are expected from a pick-up in the economy, asset recycling and interest rate cuts. Top picks are CapitaLand Ascott Trust (CLAS SP, ACCUMULATE, TP S$1.04) and Frasers Centrepoint Trust (FCT SP, ACCUMULATE, TP S$2.38).

SECTOR ROUND-UP

In a widely anticipated move, the FOMC held the federal funds rate unchanged at 5.25-5.5% for a fourth straight meeting on 31 Jan 2024, and indicated that it remains on track to cut interest rates three times this year. With lower interest rates, S-REITs will experience 1) lower financing costs; 2) higher dividend yield spreads over bonds; and 3) higher property valuations as cap rates compress. Furthermore, with interest rates peaking, we expect deal-making to return in full swing. Therefore, we expect a sector recovery in 2024-2025.

We are in the middle of the results season, and we have compiled a snapshot of some of the REITs' NPI and DPU performance thus far in the table below:

Unsurprisingly, most REITs saw a YoY decline in DPU as higher finance costs eroded distributable income. So far, most REITs remain within MAS leverage limits, apart from Manulife US REIT. Keppel Pacific Oak US REIT is the first REIT to voluntarily suspend distributions beginning 2H23 to conserve capital and to maintain its leverage within regulatory limits and bank debt covenants. Within our coverage, FEHT and CLAS had double-digit DPU growth as NPI growth outstripped rising finance and operating costs. Keppel DC REIT's 16.1% YoY DPU decline was mainly due to the uncollected rental and coupon income of c.5.5 months, amounting to S$10.5mn at the Guangdong DCs.

Retail

Dec 23 retail sales index (excluding motor vehicles) fell 2.7% YoY, compared to the 1.3% growth in Nov 23. Most industries recorded a YoY decline, with recreational goods being the biggest decliner at 12.9% due to lower demand for sporting goods. Watches and jewellery recorded the highest YoY growth at 6% due to a greater demand for jewellery, but it fell from 12.9% the month prior.

The F&B services index rose 0.3% YoY in Dec 23, extending the 1.6% growth in Nov 23, with food caterers (+14.5%) experiencing the largest growth. However, restaurants and fast-food outlets saw a YoY decline of 4.8% and 2.9%, respectively. We think retail sales will be resilient in 2024 especially after the announcement of a further S$1.9bn enhancement to the GST Assurance Package, which includes an extra S$600 in CDC vouchers for all Singaporean households and a cash payment of S$200 to S$400 for eligible Singaporeans. The S$200 in LifeSG credits for all national servicemen will also support retail sales growth going forward.

Hospitality

Singapore's international visitor arrivals grew 54% YoY in Jan 24 to 1.4mn, boosted by the Coldplay concert in late January. It is, however, still at 15% below pre-COVID levels (Figure 8). The return of Chinese travellers has been slower than expected - currently at 35% of pre-Covid levels, but we expect this to pick up in 2024, supported by the 30-day visa-free entry for Chinese citizens. We expect Singapore's international visitor arrivals to return to normalcy by early 2025.

RevPAR fell 4.8% YoY in Dec 23, with average daily room rates and occupancy falling 0.7% and 3.2ppts YoY, respectively. Dec 23 numbers suggest that room rates may have peaked as consumers grow more price conscious. However, with Coldplay in town towards the end of January, we expect RevPAR to return to growth in Jan 24. The solid line-up of concerts along with a packed MICE schedule in Singapore will underpin RevPAR growth in 2024.

INVESTMENT RECOMMENDATION

OVERWEIGHT on SREITs (Maintained)

After declining 4.4% in Jan 24, S-REITs are now trading at the 10-year average forward dividend yield of c.6.1% (Figure 5) and a P/NAV of 0.9x, 1.4x s.d. below the mean of 1.03x (Figure 4). As we enter the monetary easing cycle, we think this is a good time for investors to reposition into SREITs. We expect low single-digit DPU growth in FY24.

Due to the recent share price performance, the dividend yield spread has risen to 3.2%. It is 1.2x s.d. below the mean of 4% (Figure 2). With interest rates widely expected to decline, we expect the dividend yield spread to widen as the SG10Y yield falls.

Sub-sector preferences: Hospitality and Retail (Unchanged)

We think the hospitality sub-sector will be able to generate the most DPU growth on the back of higher RevPAR and the gradual reopening of China as outbound flight capacity from China increases. Suburban retail offers resilience in a downturn, while downtown retail stands to benefit from the recovery of international visitor arrivals, which will, in turn, lift tenant sales and sentiment.

P PhillipCapital

Retail (OVERWEIGHT). We expect tenant sales to rise further due to the increasing number of international visitor arrivals and population growth. The occupancy cost of c.15% for suburban malls and c.25% for downtown malls is lower than historical averages, leaving the potential for more positive rental reversions. There is also very little new supply entering the market. The return-to-office trend and a pick-up in major events to be held in Singapore in 2024 should continue to lift tenant sales and give confidence to retailers. Positive rental reversion, ranging from high-single-digit to low-teens, is expected for downtown malls, supported by the 30-day visa-free entry to Singapore for Chinese citizens. Demand remains robust for catchment areas around suburban malls, and we foresee a healthy mid-single-digit rental reversion continuing into FY24e.

Office (NEUTRAL). We think core CBD Grade A office rents at $11.90 psf pm in 4Q23 will come under pressure as the market absorbs more supply coming in 2024 from IOI Central Boulevard Towers (1.2mn sq ft) and Keppel South Central (600k sq ft). More downsizing could occur as global layoffs among tech firms reach Singapore. This could affect office leasing momentum and sentiment, and we, therefore, anticipate office rents to be muted in FY24.

Industrial (NEUTRAL). The slowdown in manufacturing and a bleak economic outlook will likely affect industrial property demand. Furthermore, a new supply of 1.9mn sqm is expected to come on stream in 2024, and this is expected to outstrip demand. However, industrial REITs are benefiting from the secular growth of new economy tenants such as tech, life sciences, biomedical, semiconductor and electronics manufacturing, which typically locate themselves in high-spec, science and business parks, and warehouses.

Hospitality (OVERWEIGHT). RevPAR is likely to continue its upward trajectory – but at a slower pace compared to 2023 from the higher base. Also, the increase in MICE and entertainment events in Singapore will further boost this sector. We believe the hospitality sub-sector has the most potential for DPU growth as its increase in revenue can more than offset any rise in interest expenses and operating costs.

The dividend yield spread has risen from 3.1% to 3.2% MoM and is now trading at -1.2x s.d. from the mean due to the recent share price performance.

Given the high interest rate environment, we think some S-REITs which have perpetual bonds with 2024 next call dates may redeem the bonds to save on interest costs, instead of resetting the coupon rate at a higher level.
